

TRUCK DRIVER HIGH-JACKED AT EDGELY; TRUCK FOUND LATER IN PHILADELPHIA, BUT CONTENTS VALUED AT $8,000 GONE

George J. Sykes, 40, Driver, is Being Detained in Harriman Hospital, Ill With Asthma—Was Bound With Rope and Adhesive Tape and Left in Field at Fallsington—Officers of Four Police Departments Are Investigating the Case.

Bucks County authorities, State Police, Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Philadelphia detectives, are investigating the reported hold-up and high-jacking of a truck driver and the stealing of his load of merchandise valued at between $8,000 and $10,000. The high-jacking occurred at Edgely, Saturday night, according to the driver, who is being detained by the police at the Harriman Hospital. The truck was recovered early yesterday on Ontario street, Philadelphia, but the contents had been removed.

The driver being detained is George J. Sykes, 40, North Etting street, Philadelphia. He is in the Harriman Hospital suffering with an attack of asthma.

Sykes telephoned police early Sunday morning and reported that he was at Fallsington. He said, according to the officers, that he had been high-jacked at Edgely, Saturday night, put into a car and driven to a field and then to Tabor road in Falls township and tied to a tree. His cap was pulled down over his face, he told the officers, and fastened with adhesive tape. Later he managed to work himself loose and went to the home of Gottfried Huber.

Penna. Motor Police Riley and Carfagno took Sykes to the Bristol Municipal Building and along with Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo questioned him concerning the details.

Sykes was examined by a physician who told the authorities there was no evidence of Sykes having been struck on the jaw as hard as he claimed, and that there were no evidences of adhesive tape having been applied to his neck.

The officers say that Sykes told them that he left Philadelphia at 8.15 Saturday night with a truck and trailer loaded with a miscellaneous cargo. On reaching Mill street and the Highway, here, he noticed that his motor was knocking. He says he retarded the spark and upon reaching Edgely opposite the residence of John L. Kilcoyne, found his motor heating up. Then Sykes went to the Kilcoyne residence and procured four buckets of water. It was while Sykes was standing on the bumper of the truck, pouring water into the radiator that he claims a man shoved a pistol into his side and knocked him unconscious. Sykes states that he was placed on the floor of an automobile and driven around for a time, taken to the fields, bound, and left as he described.

The officers at once began a thorough investigation and yesterday Officer Wells, federal bureau of investigation, and Detective Brown of Philadelphia detective bureau, entered the case.

The officers reported that Sykes was given the water at the Kilcoyne residence, as he stated. They did not, however, hear any unusual noise, and remember seeing the truck standing on the highway steaming. It is also stated that another man was standing beside Sykes as he poured the water into the radiator of the truck. The truck then left.

The truck belonged to the Branch Storage Co., Melvale and Clearfield streets, Philadelphia, which operates a trucking service.

Chinese People Will Never Be Defeated

Tokyo, April 25—Japan will defeat the Chinese army, but never the Chinese people.

This today summarized the eventual outcome of the bloody warfare which has raged for almost two years in the Far East.

Great cities have been reduced to ashes and centers of cultural learning demolished. But the Chinese people have yet to be brought to their knees.

Both sides in the extended conflict earnestly desire suspension of hostilities as early as possible.

The Chinese want the war to end so that they may bargain for the future and retain whatever of their territory and resources are left. The Japanese want to bring it to a conclusion because the Chinese "adventure" has proved far more costly in lives and in money than had been anticipated.

James Pleads For Harmony

Pittsburgh, Apr. 25—Judge Arthur James, candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, today made a strong plea for the consolidation of all factions of his party to insure the defeat of New Deal principles in this state next November.

Judge James said four weeks of campaigning had convinced him that former Governor Gifford Pinchot, was "virtually out of the fight" and that the long record of "Pinchot defeats" had turned the GOP against him.

"The Pinchot boom was based on unofficial foundations," James stated. "What support he mustered was on the theory that no alternative choice was open to voters, and not on any possible demand that Pinchot be a leader."

Two other elements were decisive in exploding the myth that "Pinchot can win."

"One was the failure to meet my challenge to state his position on the New Deal—to make clear how he proposed to reconcile his Republicanism with his avowed sympathy with New Deal theories."

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1938, by The Baltimore Sun)

Mr. Lewis's Gamble

Washington, April 23. STRIPPED OF its extraordinary local issues, which seem to get steadily uglier and meaner all the time, the Democratic primary fight in Pennsylvania has very great national interest. Nothing quite like it has taken place in the country before. It isn't really a struggle between factions of the Democratic party—it's a struggle between factions of organized labor with the so-called Democratic bosses playing secondary roles and their once overwhelming machine split asunder.

The basic facts are somewhat obscured by the mud with which the more conspicuous figures on both sides are being smeared. As a pleased Republican remarked: "The Democrats are beginning to tell the truth about each other." Certainly some surprising things are coming out—among them that Governor Earle, from whom no one has echoed more loudly the Rooseveltian denunciations of business men, borrowed a good many thousands of dollars from Mr. McCloskey, the contractor, who later received a good many million dollars worth of contracts from Governor Earle's State Authority. From the national angle, however, the important thing is that Mr. John L. Lewis has abandoned his pose as the power behind Senator Guffey and has made it plain that Senator Guffey is his political vassal rather than ally. He stands out in the open today as Mr. Guffey's boss. By forcing upon that gentleman a complete C.I.O. ticket and swinging him away from his friend, Mr. Earle, he has made it clear that Mr. Guffey's part is to follow not lead. Mr. Guffey being more closely identified politically

Arrest Croydon Man For Cashing Stolen Relief Check

A Croydon man was arrested Saturday upon complaint of the State Treasury Department, accused of cashing a relief check made out in the name of another person.

The man arrested by Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo, upon the request of Investigator Swartz, was Robert Walt, State Road.

According to Russo, the arrest was made when it was found that Walt had taken the relief check of Elizabeth McKay and gotten a bill of groceries costing $1.50, at the store of Passanante, Pond street, Bristol.

Walt, according to Russo, signed a confession, and stated that he was out of work, and that there was nothing to eat in the house for his wife and one child. Walt told Russo that he had tried for several weeks to get a relief order, but never succeeded. He took the McKay check, which he said he found in an envelope in his mail box, on March 17th. He took the check to Passanante and is said to have told them that the name on the check was that of his wife.

When the check was put through in the usual routine it was discovered that it had not been cashed by the proper individual.

The State started an investigation and ordered Walt's arrest. He was given a hearing before Justice of Peace James Laughlin, and held in $300 bail for court.

Ceremony is Performed by Rev. Glass in St. Mark's Rectory

TO LIVE IN EDGELY

A wedding was solemnized on Saturday afternoon at four o'clock, in the rectory of St. Mark's Catholic Church, when Miss Elizabeth Rishel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton A. Rishel, Mackeyville, and William J. Slater, son of Mrs. Thomas Slater, 313 Washington street, were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Albert Glass, in the presence of a few relatives and friends.

The bride was attractive in a dress of navy blue chiffon, street length, with the bodice featuring a white vestee, collar of white organdy ruffling, and short puffed sleeves. Navy blue slippers, gloves, and a navy blue hat with white trimming completed the costume. Her flowers were a corsage of sweet peas.

After a dinner at the home of the groom, the couple left for their newly-furnished home, 35 Woodside avenue, Edgely.

The bride, prior to her marriage, resided on Mulberry street. She is a teacher of the third and fourth grades of Harriman school. Mr. Slater is in the sign-painting business.

Rescue Four Youths As Their Boat Sinks in River

Two borough councilmen, Clarence Winter and William Warner, along with "Bud" Bruner and Fred Veiks were cast in the roll of life savers yesterday afternoon, when they pulled four young men out of the Delaware river opposite the Anchor Yacht Club. The name of only one of the four is known here—George Doole, Mercer street, Philadelphia. The other three were friends of Doole and the quartette was enroute to Doole's bungalow on Burlington Island.

At about 12.30 yesterday afternoon the four youths started to cross the river in a row boat with improvised paddles. Before the youths left the shore those at the Anchor Yacht Club warned them, that they were taking a chance in endeavoring to cross the stream in such a manner. But undaunted they pushed out into the stream.

As the group reached the center of the river their boat began to fill with water and gradually became submerged. The youths began to divest themselves of their outer garments and finally as they jumped out of the boat the rescue group, Winter, Bruner, Weik, Warner, Edward Schultz and Ray Nickelson went to the rescue.

All four were helped to safety and the boat recovered. The youths then continued their trip to the bungalow. They were drenched and shivering from the bath in the cold water of the Delaware.

"JIMMY" SAFE IN ST. CHARLES' CHURCH DURING THE NIGHT

Poor Boxes and Shrine Are Rifled; Money is Also Taken from Coin Box

WINDOW IS SMASHED

Motor Police and Bucks County Detective Are Making Investigation

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Apr. 25—An entrance was forced into St. Charles Church, here, during the night, a large steel safe "jimmied" open, poor boxes rifled, money taken from a coin box on the book rack, and the shrine before St. Theresa was rifled.

It could not be stated definitely this morning just how much money the thieves had obtained. Pennsylvania Motor Police and Bucks County detective Anthony Russo, have been notified of the robbery, and will make an investigation.

The Rev. Fr. John Nugent was out of town this morning when an attempt was made to learn the extent of the robbery.

Entrance was gained to the building by smashing the lower section of a large stained glass window on the East side of the building. The door of a large steel safe was then "jimmied" off and practically wrecked. Collections taken at the church during the day were kept in this safe, but a spokesman at the rectory this morning said he could not state whether the collections had been removed last night or not. Three poor boxes were smashed and the contents taken. A coin box attached to a book rack in which contributions were made for purchase of literature was ripped off and opened. The lock box at the shrine before St. Theresa was broken open and its contents taken.

Scordia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Scordia, 926 Beaver street, being wed to John Terracina, son of Mrs. John Ferraro, 508 Jefferson avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Peter Pinci. Miss Elizabeth Scordia, sister of the bride, sang "Ave Maria," and Miss Mary Colella, Beaver street, sang "The Rosary." The soloists were accompanied by violin and cello music.

The maid of honor was Miss Angeline Sylvestri, Elm street, cousin of the groom; the bridesmaids, Miss Louise Tambarello, 927 Mansion St., and Miss Carmella Castor, Penn St. Serving the groom as best man was Dominick Stallone, 932 Jefferson avenue; and the usher was Chester Terracina, brother of the groom.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in white chiffon. The shirred bodice was made with square cut neckline. The long sleeves ended in a point. The full skirt had a long train. She wore white satin sandals and a veil of tulle, attached to a crown shape headpiece of tulle, trimmed with orange blossoms. Her flowers were calla lilies.

The maid of honor wore a gown of wood-violet chiffon, a spray of varicolored flowers trimmed the neckline in front. The front of the bodice was shirred and the sleeves were short and puffed. The long skirt was flared at the bottom. Miss Sylvestri wore a yellow tulle cap with a halo of satin, yellow sandals, lace mits and carried yellow roses. The bridesmaids were gowned like the maid of honor, but in different color tones. MEN SHOULD BE INCLUDED

The woman of today is inclined to be wary in financial matters. There are at least two reasons for this. Primarily, women have become to some degree business partners of their husbands. They no longer are kept in ignorance of the family's financial affairs and even though they do not enter the marts of trade, subconsciously they pick up considerable knowledge of finance. In addition, the way of a high-pressure securities salesman with a woman has been accorded such wide publicity for years that women have tended toward extreme caution and conservatism. As a class they are no longer the easy marks they once were, or were reputed to have been.

Information in the hands of life insurance companies on the ultimate destination of the millions paid annually to widows is proof, however, that when the General Federation of Women's Clubs some time ago set out to educate womanhood in the pitfalls of investment it had a fertile field to work in. There are still many gullible and innocent investors among the protected sex, in spite of the great strides taken in recent years.

But it is not only the women who are in need of this sort of education and enlightenment. It would be a good thing if educational campaigns of this sort were extended to include men, for they probably contribute considerably more than women to the Get-Rich-Quick genre.

WASTED ENERGY

Roger Babson, noted statistician, said in a recent address that the standard of living in the average family could be doubled, if people would avoid the waste of energy.

The American people have always had a reputation for wasting their resources. Not merely have they burned up vast quantities of forests, but the resources of human energy have been thrown away.

Every preventable accident is a waste of energy. An automobile driver hurries around a corner because he thinks his time is too precious to waste. 30 seconds in cautious action. That moment of hasty action may cost him thousands of dollars.

Every fire loss is a waste of energy. If you are careless with a heater in your home, and your house burns down, thousands of dollars are wasted. You do not realize the waste if your loss is covered by insurance. The people as a whole have to pay for it. When $500,000,000 a year is burned up in such losses, a large slice of the nation's energy is wasted.

Unbathily living and dissipation waste energy. Many people feel that their physical powers are unlimited. They are up late nights, they lose their sleep. They yield to various vices. The result is that physical deterioration begins at an early age and their productive power is diminished. Their fun has cost them many thousands of dollars.

Yet the Russian way is comparatively painless. When the purge was sulphur and molasses the sufferer had to put up with himself for weeks.

"Love I Dare Not" by ALLENE CORLISS

CHAPTER XXIX

Tommy said unexpectedly, "I'm sorry about the show." He didn't sound sorry. He simply said the words dispassionately, as if he didn't care one way or the other.

"So am I, but mostly because I feel that it hadn't been for me, the play would have been a success."

"You can't tell... it might have failed, anyway. That sort of thing scarcely ever catches on. Alec tells me you're rehearsing again."

"Yes, Sam Bernstein was good enough to give me another chance."

"Just a girl nothing can stop. Determined as hell, aren't you?"

"I don't know. I probably am. But it's natural, isn't it, to want to keep on trying even if you have had one failure?"

"I should think it would have been more natural for you to have wanted to go to London with Alec... I take it," said Tommy evenly, "that you could have gone with him?"

"Yes, but we both thought I should stay here and take this part."

"Well, you'll look nice in the papers tomorrow morning and it'll be a swell publicity. Bernstein will be delighted."

"Miss Caroline Hoyt, who is rehearsing for a leading role in the next Sam Bernstein production, announces that she will marry Alec Graham, playwright, immediately upon his return from London."

"I don't suppose," he added, "that Bernstein had anything to do about sending those reporters along?"

"No," said Caroline frigidly, "nothing at all."

"I didn't know," said Tommy. "It just seemed to me, as the innocent bystander, that Alec seemed a little surprised... pleased, of course, but startled."

"Tommy—" she stopped suddenly and stared at him. "Why must we always quarrel like this? Why do you dislike me so intensely?"

"How like a woman to pick a place like this for a scene; come along or we'll never find a cab."

She said, "There's one now," and ran toward it, biting her lips, winking back angry tears.

"Same address?" Tommy asked, and she nodded without looking at him. Then she realized suddenly that he was not coming with her. That he was letting her go off alone—

She cried, "But aren't you?"

"Sorry, but I can't. I left a party to beat it down and say good-by to Alec... it's to hell-and-gone-up-town, so if you don't mind..."

He was smiling at her, but his smile like his voice held neither warmth nor reality... it was just a brief twisting apart of his well-cut lips.

Caroline said, "No, I don't mind..." She said, "Thanks so much..."

"You were forever coming back," Roxanne said. "You've been gone literally hours."

"I've been gone," said Tommy concisely, "exactly an hour and ten minutes. I could scarcely have done it in any less time."

This was not quite true. He had been gone an hour and twenty minutes. He had stopped twice after he left Caroline... once at a bar on West Forty-fifth Street and once at a bar on West Fifty-fourth. At each place he had had a short, quick drink. In a little while he would be able to forget how disappointed her eyes had looked when she realized he was not going with her in the cab. In a little while he would forget how young and breathless her voice had sounded saying, "Yes... you can say we both want to announce our engagement to each other..."

In a little while, and if he continued to drink an occasional brandy, he would stop feeling so shot to pieces about it, even if he didn't forget any of it. In a little while, it simply wouldn't matter so much. He'd been through this before, it happened every time he saw her, and he knew.

He said now to Roxanne, "Had enough of this? Want to go home?"

She nodded, all the sulkiness sliding out of her eyes. "Yes, darling, let's..."

When they arrived at the Talbotts' duplex apartment on Sixty-third Street, she said, "Come on up, Tommy. The family are weekendening in Virginia..."

"...we can have the place to ourselves."

That, thought Tommy, following her into the elevator, was nothing new. They usually did have it to themselves. He sometimes wondered if either of Roxanne's parents ever spent an evening at home. And invariably decided that they didn't.

Anyhow, he seldom if ever saw them and he had spent by now a great many evenings, or at least the tag-ends of them, in this apartment.

But he had never been in the room into which Roxanne brought him presently. It was her own small sitting-room on the second floor. A and stared at it, that had been conceived lovingly and dedicated to soft, intimate moments at the end of an evening. Pale velvet carpet, deep satin couch, an enormous circular mirror against one wall. Lilacs in huge jars at either end of a high ivory mantel.

Lilacs, thought Tommy irritably, belonged out of doors in the spring of the year. April, wasn't it, or was it May? Anyhow, it wasn't November.

Roxanne said, "You've been drinking brandy, haven't you?" She opened a cabinet and set out a small crystal decanter and two slender stemmed glasses. Her dress, very recently off a French boat, was black satin and out to reveal all of her very lovely shoulders.

He looked at her and remembered that the winter before she had been sleek and shining in silver metal cloth, a single orchid clinging to her left shoulder. He had never liked the silver metal cloth gowns nor that single flaming orchid. He liked her better the way she was tonight...

...in this black dress, her skin white and gardenia-smooth, pearls twisted about her throat... he liked her better, but he still didn't like her enough. Enough for what?

She sat down on the satin couch and reached out one slim hand and

Miss Mabel Ciotti Is The Bride of John Casmirri

A Sunday wedding took place at three p. m. in St. Ann's Catholic Church, when Miss Mabel Ciotti, daughter of Mrs. Levia Ciotti, 426 Jefferson avenue, became the bride of John Casmirri, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Casmirri, 633 Corson street. The Rev. Peter Pinci officiated. Miss Frances Tamburella played Lohengrin's wedding march, and Miss Mary Missinelli, 595 Pond street, sang "The Rosary."

The bride was attended by Miss Emma Marucci, Trenton avenue, as maid of honor; Miss Mary Semese, Wilmington, Del., as bridesmaid, and Miss Loretta Mari, 691 Garden street, niece of the bride, as flower-girl. Serving the groom as best man was his brother, Dominick Casmirri. The ring-bearer was Ernest Mari, Mansion street, a cousin of the groom.

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Frank Clotti, Holmesburg, was gown in white satin, fashioned on princess lines, with high neckline trimmed in front with orange blossoms, and high standing lace collar in back. The long sleeves were of lace and satin. The skirt had a train. The bridal veil of tulle with face veil fell from a wreath of orange blossoms. Her sandals were white satin, and she carried calla lilies.

The maid of honor was attractive in peach mousseline-de-soie made jacket effect with short puffed sleeves. The long, full skirt had a slight train. The neckline of the dress was trimmed with aqua blue bow. She wore a lace bonnet and slippers in aqua tone, and carried a bouquet of tea roses. The bridesmaid was attired in a gown like the one worn by the maid of honor, but different in color. Her dress was aqua tone with peach accessories, and she carried tea roses. The little flower girl was charming in a baby blue pleated net dress. The dress was trimmed with ruffles of the material, and peach satin bows. White slippers, blue anklets and blue bonnet trimmed with blue and peach bow completed her costume, and she carried a small bouquet of tea roses. The ring-bearer wore a tuxedo suit.

A reception was held in the Sons of Italy Hall, 209 guests attending. The couple left Sunday evening for New York, where they will remain several days, then motor to Massachusetts for several days' visit. The couple will reside at the home of the bride's mother.

further investigation and upon seeing that it was the body of a man, returned to Jefferson avenue and telephoned police headquarters. Officer Ferry and Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo responded. Ferry at once recognized Pavlik, and Mrs. Pavlik was brought to the scene to identify the body.

Mrs. Pavlik said her husband left home Saturday afternoon and did not return. In addition to the wife there are three children surviving.

Deputy Coroner Dr. James P. Lawler gave drowning as the cause of death.

Pavlik was employed by the Paterson Parchment Paper Company, and had resided here about three years.

Authorities are of the opinion that Pavlik was lying on the canal bank and falling asleep, perhaps rolled into the water and drowned.

HE IS, they say, not in the least interested in either the Democratic or the Republican party, or in the New Deal or Mr. Roosevelt. A complete victory in Pennsylvania will give him the prestige and power necessary to change labor's role in politics from that of a pressure group to a genuine national party, whose appeal, as in England, would not be confined exclusively to the labor voters but be rather general. The American Labor party in New York, now little more than a pressure group, could be promptly expanded and Mr. Lewis thus start off with his new party well entrenched in the two largest States.

A GOOD deal of this seems fanciful and none of it may develop. Nevertheless, it happens to be a fact that it is the political dream cherished at the moment by Mr. Lewis's particular labor advisers and friends, and it undoubtedly will take on some substance should a complete victory come to him in Pennsylvania. Evidence that the potentialities of a Lewis triumph in the State are understood is given in the determined opposition of the A. F. of L. faction, which will strain every effort to defeat the Lewis ticket in the primary, or failing that, in the general election. It simply cannot afford to let him get away with it.

NO LABOR leader has ever been able to do this sort of thing publicly to a United States Senator; nor to a national Administration. The fury of the battle is such that it is difficult for the voters to see clearly, but it ought to be plain

BENSALEM GIRLS TO OPEN SEASON IN SOFT-BALL LEAGUE, OPPOSING LANGHORNE SQUAWS AT LANGHORNE

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Apr. 25.—For the first time in the school's history of athletics, the girls of Bensalem high school will don gym suits to play competitive baseball when they meet the Langhorne Squaws at Langhorne this afternoon in an opening tilt in the newly formed Lower Bucks County Softball League.

Coach Helen Smith, who has been out since the conclusion of the basketball season with an infected throat, returned last week to take over the team to pilot it through its initial campaign in the circuit. During the absence, Miss Elizabeth Dildine took charge of the team and drilled them in the fundamentals.

A squad of approximately 40 candidates reported for the 20 positions on the team which will make up two complete squads. To date the squad has been cut to 25 with eight more due to feel the swing of the axe, following today's tilt. Miss Smith has definitely set her mind upon 16 of the 25 she now has on hand and they are sure to remain on the team. The other four are still uncertain and will be selected from the remaining dozen to complete the squad of 20.

Those who are definitely sure of remaining on the team this year are Thelma Vandegrift, Margaret Hughes, Mabel Ridge, Edna Robertson, Caroline Zuvich, Josephine Sciola, Peggy States, Betty Dougherty, Peg Harris, Betty Bond, Ruth Foster, Claire Ellison, Helen Cahill, Esther Dill and Helen Samsel.

Although the girls open their campaign against the mythical champions of Lower Bucks County when they oppose the Squaws this afternoon, they are very optimistic and eager to await that ball as it comes lobbing up to the plate. The Owlets have been practicing for nearly a month now in preparation for this first game and are all pepped up and enthused over their opening ball game. This tilt was originally scheduled to be played on Thursday afternoon, April 21, but because Langhorne High students were busy spending three days in the Capitol last week the game was set back to today.

Miss Smith, too, is hopeful of placing her initial baseball team in the new league high up among the standings in the seven club circuit. She is optimistic because she feels that the girls who now compose the team are quite capable and have the ability to come through for her. Even though the material is new, the girls show quite a bit of promise and coach Smith is therefore relying upon them for some victories to place them well up among the leaders in the final standings for their first season.

Among the most outstanding candidates are Mabel Ridge, Thelma Vandegrift, and Margaret Hughes. Mabel Ridge holds down the first base job at the present time but can also handle the catching assignment capably if called upon for that work. She is also the team's leading camp slugger and is expected to pack a punch in the batting order. Thelma Vandegrift, like Ridge, can play both catcher and first base, but right now is slated to handle the job behind the bat for the opening game anyway. She will, in all probability, handle the curves of Margaret Hughes, whom coach Smith has selected to toss them in at the Red and Blue hitters this afternoon. Hughes is the team's outstanding pitcher.

The inner defense line, which is made up of five players, includes Edna Robertson at second base, Caroline Zuvich at third base, Peggy States at shortstop, and Josephine Sciola at the fifth position which is called the short-field or right shortstop. Her position on the field is between first and second base, on the manner of the regular shortstop as the second baseman plays on the bag. Of course Ridge will be at first base.

In the outer garden will be Betty Bond, Peg Harris and Betty Dougherty from left to right respectively. All of these are also pretty fair hitters as well as good fielders. Claire Ellison, Helen Cahill, and Esther Dill, all of whom will play a substitute role, are good hitters and Miss Smith expects to use them in a pinch if necessary. They can play both infield and outfield. Peg States and Caroline Zuvich are accredited as being a good pair of hunters and may be called upon to advance teammates via this method when necessary.

Besides these, coach Smith has a trio of good relief fingers in Ruth Foster, Claire Gerstley and Helen Samsel, all of whom will no doubt see plenty of action this season. As a matter of fact, they may have the chance to pitch today if Hughes finds the going a bit rough against the Squaws this afternoon. However, Miss Smith as well as Peg Hughes hopes this will not be necessary.

Injury has already stalked the camp but only in a minor role. The victims were Edna Robertson and Caroline Zuvich, both of whom turned their ankles in practice sessions, but both are expected to be in shape for today's opener—at least they hope to be at any rate.

The girls' diamond is only two-thirds the size of the regulation boys' field, being only 60 feet square where as the boys' field is regulated at 90 square feet. The game is very fast despite the numerous hits, runs and errors, because the girls don't take any time in handling the ball and they usually swing at the first or second pitch. Usually the boys' baseball coach acts in the capacity of umpire of balls and strikes and one of the players on the boys home team calls them on the bases.

They're off today at 3:30—the Bensalem Owlets, and Langhorne Squaws, absence, Miss Elizabeth Dildine took charge of the team and drilled them in the fundamentals.

RANGERS NOSE OUT SAXONS; SCORE, 5 TO 4

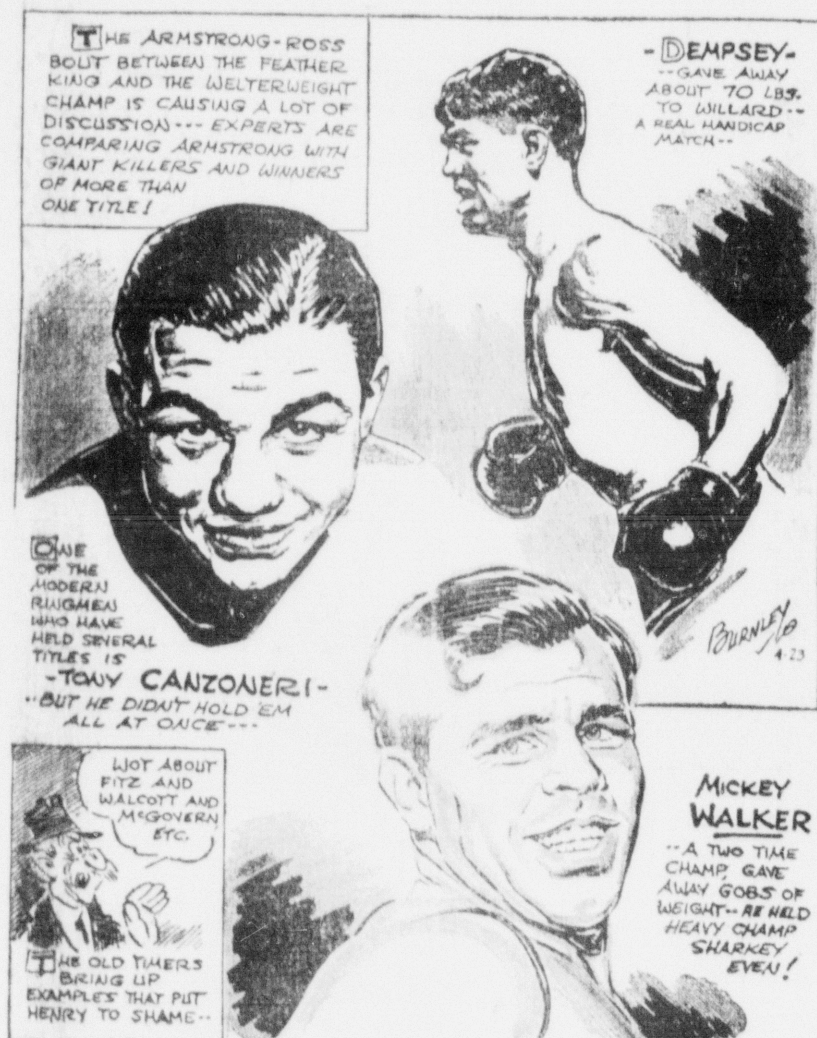

Led by the effective pitching of "Danny" Mazzillo the Harriman Rangers, formerly the Nonames, defeated the Saxons at the High School field Sunday afternoon by the score of 5 to 4.

A late inning rally enabled the Rangers to forge ahead. "Flash" LaPolla weakened in the sixth inning and was outpitched by Mazzillo. Bobby Baroth and Mazzillo led the attack on LaPolla with two hits apiece. For the Saxons LaPolla had two hits while Palumbo played a nice game at shortstop.

Armstrong Test Stirs Memories

By BURNLEY

When Henry Armstrong climbs through the ropes against Barney Ross next month he will be making modern fistie history.

Not since the days of Terry McGovern, Joe Walcott and Bob Fitzsimmons has a fighter taken on the leader of a class two divisions heavier than his own. Armstrong, the feather champ, is expected to weigh in at the lightweight limit of 135 pounds, while Ross, welter king, will come in at about 150 pounds under his 147 pound limit.

The fact that Ross is a light welterweight, while Armstrong's poundage is quite elastic, will make the difference in weight less than one might expect.

There have been a number of famous fighters who gave away gobs of poundage and won. Joe Walcott, a welter, used to fight heavyweights, and kayoed the 180-pound Joe Chynowski. Bob Fitzsimmons, at 165 pounds, held the heavy title. Mickey Walker often gave away weight, once losing to middleweight champ Greb when Mike held the welter laurels. On another occasion Mickey held Jack Sharkey, then the outstanding heavyweight, to a draw.

Jack Dempsey gained the title of giant killer when he crushed the titanic Willard, giving away about 70 pounds to Jess. Jack Dillon, a light-heavy, also was given the giant killer nickname when he used to belt out much bigger men.

If Armstrong should win the welter crown and then beat Lou Ambers for the lightweight title, it will be a truly phenomenal feat. Fitz held three titles, but neglected the middleweight honors after copping the heavy diadem. Canzonieri held three championships, if you count the synthetic junior lightweight title, but even at that Tony lost the feather laurels before he won the other two. Walker held two titles but not at the same time.

Russell S. Kramer, Perkasio's amateur photographer, was again signally honored when a print he entered in competition with nearly 5000 prints from every state in this country and Canada was awarded second prize. Thirty-one awards ranging from $5.00 to $75 were made. Mr. Kramer received $50 as second prize.

His prize winning print titled "Lady Nicotine" was an excellent work in black and white, in which 23 exposures were combined in one print. It showed a profile of a girl with a cigarette between her lips and in a semi-circle in front of the profile were 22 cigarettes and as many lighted matches. Each cigarette and lighted match was exposed separately. Miss Eleanor Trumbore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Trumbore, South Third street, posed for the profile. Incidentally, Miss Trumbore is not a smoker and Mr. Kramer fashioned a white pencil to approximate proportions which was substituted for a cigarette by Miss Trumbore.

Preparations have been completed for the mass meeting of the Republican clubs of upper Bucks county which will be held in Moose Hall, Sellersville, on Thursday evening, April 28th. Various clubs sponsoring this meeting have made it clear that the purpose of the meeting is not to support the candidates, but rather to give the voters an opportunity to express their opposition to the growing weakness of the so-called Third New Deal and its policies.

"How much have the tragic errors of the past year restored the courage of conservative and truly liberal people?" will be the question to be considered at this meeting.

Included among the speakers will be Judge Theodore Rosen, Philadelphia, and Mrs. Edna Carroll, Philadelphia, president of the Women's Republican Club of Pennsylvania and vice-chairman of the Republican City Committee of Philadelphia. Mrs. Carroll will be presented by Mrs. John W. Cooper, Pineville, president of the Bucks County Council of Republican Women.

PINKY HAS JUST TOLD PAT AND "THE BUSTER," THAT MOLLY IS AT THE COUNTRY INN WITH "DUTCH" MULLER.

BY THE WAY, PINKY, DID YOU GIVE MY LAST NOTE TO THE GOVERNOR?

NOT TO HIM IN PERSON. A CLERK TOOK IT FROM ME. HE SAID THE GOVERNOR COULDN'T BE DISTURBED.

SO THAT'S IT! NOW LISTEN, PINKY, WE'VE GOT NO TIME TO WASTE. GET THIS RIGHT. TAKE SAMMY UP TO THE CAPITOL AND PUT THE FINGER ON THAT CLERK. TELL SAMMY TO CLAP HIM IN JAIL—NO LAWYERS AND NO TELEPHONING. WHILE YOU'RE THERE, TELL THE GOVERNOR TO HAVE THE COUNTRY INN SUR-ROUNDED BY STATE TROOPERS BUT NOT FOR TWO HOURS.

THEN GET THE CHIEF OF POLICE TO RAID BRODER'S COMMISSION COMPANY AND THE TRUCKING CONCERN IN BACK OF IT. TELL THE CHIEF TO HANDLE IT PERSONALLY TO GUARD AGAINST LEAKS. ARREST EVERYBODY ROUND IN BOTH PLACES. THEN HAVE SAM PUT GUS, THE TRANSFER AGENT, UNDER LOCK AND KEY. NOW, GO!—AND MAKE IT FAST!
